Reaching for the Heavens: From the Vatican and from Le Moyne
10 a.m., SCA 101, Science Center

George V. Coyne, S.J., the McDevitt Chair in Religious Philosophy, came to Le Moyne from the Vatican Observatory in January 2012, to continue his decades-long study of the evolution of the universe. The Vatican Observatory is the only scientific research institute in the Vatican. Its headquarters are located in the Papal Gardens at Castel Gandolfo outside Rome, Italy, with a research institute in Tucson, Arizona, USA. Jesuit astronomers at the Vatican have for centuries been exploring the mysteries of the universe. Now, with the new science building at Le Moyne College, Father Coyne is pursuing that tradition.
