Welcome to Le Moyne!

Welcome to the Class of 2015! I have spent three of the best years of my life at Le Moyne College and want to offer my perspective as your Orientation Committee chair.

First, take a deep breath and relax. You are in the same boat as your classmates, and you all have the same worries. Be outgoing, leave the door to your room open so people can come in and say hello (or, if you're commuting, introduce yourself in class or in your assigned residence hall); walk around campus and say hello to a complete stranger (yes, this is the time you can ignore what your parents have always taught you about not talking to strangers, so do it!). You will soon find that there are few strangers here. We tend to get to know one another. Remember, too, that your schedule, interests and dreams will be different from everyone else's, so share them. Stand out and make your talents and aspirations known – to your classmates and faculty. If you allow yourself to do these things, you will make the best memories and best friends here for life!

Second, join a club, sport or an organization that you don't think you would have joined in high school. This will allow you to meet a whole new group of people, which will broaden your horizons and open your world to new opportunities.

Third, doing poorly on a test or a homework assignment may happen. Think proactively. If you're struggling, all of us are here to support you. Get to know your professors early. They will help. So will your advisor, tutors, RA, classmates and learning community members. The faculty and staff at Le Moyne will know you by name. Most of all, your first-year advisor and your professors all have one thing in common. They want you to succeed; they want to challenge you to grow and figure out how to navigate college, but they'll be right there with you.

Finally, you can only learn what college is about by experiencing it yourself. Le Moyne has many activities planned for you throughout the semester, and I hope to see you at the concerts, dances, and every Thursday night event hosted by the Le Moyne Student Programming Board, which does a phenomenal job providing entertainment.

I confess that I'm not ready to leave in what will be a short nine months. It seems like yesterday that I was in your shoes. Be aware that, for just a brief time in your life, you will be a Dolphin, so make the most of it. It will fly by, and you will be in my shoes before you know it!

Welcome to the world of college! As you become involved in college life, you will expand your intellectual horizons, experience new ways of thinking, and further develop your professional and personal skills. The faculty and staff at Le Moyne will be here to support you in these endeavors, and the guidance you receive as men and women of faith in the Jesuit tradition!

Within the next few weeks, I will be presenting to you Labor Day as well as other important information you should know. As a member of the Class of 2015, you are encouraged to attend Fall Orientation. We hope you will contribute your participation to the Le Moyne Book and Beyond.

If you have a question, please contact the staff you will be working with: your RA or Orientation Committee members at the Division of Student Development or the Campus Center.

Enjoy the experience!
