PETER J. DiLAURA '78 (BOARD CHAIR)

Peter J. DiLaura '78 is the CEO of CADimensions Inc. in East Syracuse, N.Y. Founded in 1989, CADimensions provides value-added solutions to the engineering, manufacturing and educational industries, with sales, technical support, training, 3D Printing and application consulting. The company's operations and customers span New York, New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

CADimensions mission has always been "to provide our customers with innovative and value-added solutions that empower them to impact the world." Before establishing CADimensions, DiLaura's professional background involved engineering product sales and marketing. Early in his career he became involved in Computer Aided Design application software and realized he had a strong commitment for working with manufacturing and design engineers in addressing their design challenges. Today, CADimensions works with over 4,000 customers and represents key vendors in these industries.

DiLaura has served the College as a member of the board of regents and as a member and president of the Alumni Association Board. He has been a volunteer with the Office of Career Advising and Development since 1994 and with the Madden mentor program at Le Moyne since 2008. In addition, he has been a strong supporter and member of his class reunion committees.

DiLaura earned a bachelor's degree in business from Le Moyne College.

JUDY P. FRODIGH '83

Judy P. Frodigh '83 is a managing partner at Altura Capital Fund and has an outstanding track record of building world-class firms and developing the talent to grow them. Making a social impact has been an integral part of her work, including launching an award-winning diversity program, expanding a corporate charitable effort that donated more than $35 million to organizations supporting young people, and creating and managing a corporate philanthropy program that supports a wide variety of national charities.

Frodigh is an executive leader with a proven track record of executing strategic vision and driving organizational performance across firm operations, business development and talent management at private equity and financial services firms.

Before joining Altura, Frodigh was most recently a founding member of Huntsman Gay Global Capital (now HGGC), where she helped build the middle market firm's infrastructure, define the brand, and drive business growth. While there, she developed and executed business building strategies that helped the firm raise a $1.2 billion debut fund and build a top-performing, 60-person firm in four years.

Prior to that, Frodigh spent eight years at Bain Capital as head of global human resources. She built and led all human resource strategic plans and played an instrumental role in all aspects of the business related to the firm's expansion, ranging from the opening of six offices around the globe – including Tokyo, Mumbai and Munich – to growing staff from 80 to 800 people.

She managed operations throughout the raising of five funds and the diversification of investment strategy. Judy developed processes to support growth and maintain a cohesive, high-performing culture.

Earlier in her career, Frodigh was the director of global human resources at Wellington Management Company and held senior leadership positions at Putnam Investments and MFS.

She holds a bachelor's degree from Le Moyne College and a master's degree from Boston University. She serves on a number of nonprofit and civic boards.

MICHAEL GARANZINI, S.J.

Michael Garanzini, S.J., is the president of the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities (AJCU) beginning July 1, 2020. Father Garanzini currently serves as both secretary of higher education of the Society of Jesus as well as chair of the board of directors for the International Association of Jesuit Universities (IAJU). He will complete his eighth year of service to that association while working at AJCU.

Prior to these roles, Father Garanzini was president of Loyola University Chicago from 2001 to 2015. During his 14 years at Loyola, he served on the AJCU board of directors, including a term as chair. Under his leadership, Loyola grew in national recognition as an innovator in higher education, thanks to the establishment of Arrupe College, the first Jesuit Community College in the United States.

While serving as secretary for Higher Education, Father Garanzini led several initiatives to facilitate national and international collaboration among Jesuit institutions. In 2013, he hosted the first-ever meeting of Jesuit provincials, presidents and board chairs of U.S. Jesuit Colleges and Universities with former Superior General Jesuit Father Adolfo Nicolas at Loyola Chicago.

In 2016, Father Garanzini served as a delegate for General Congregation 36, a convening of Jesuits from across the world to elect a new Superior General and issue a new set of decrees for the Society of Jesus. In response to a call for increased networking at GC36, Father Garanzini organized a meeting at the University of Deusto in Bilbao, Spain, in 2018 to launch the International Association of Jesuit Universities.

Father Garanzini received a bachelor's degree in psychology from Saint Louis University and a doctorate in psychology in religion from the Graduate Theological Union/University of California, Berkeley. He has taught at the University of San Francisco, the Gregorian University in Rome, Rockhurst University and Fordham University. Additional academic appointments include four years as academic vice president at Saint Louis University and two years as special assistant to the president at Georgetown University. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1971 and was ordained as a priest in 1980.

DENISE A. QUINN '78

Denise A. Quinn '78 retired in 2019 as a vice-president/plant manager after 41 years with what is today the Molson Coors Beverage Company. She is a native of Syracuse who started her career in the Miller Brewing Company Container Division in Fulton, N.Y., holding positions in the quality and production departments. She was promoted to the Trenton, Ohio, brewery in 1991 as part of the start-up team and held positions with increasing responsibilities in the operations departments before becoming the brewery manager of the acquired Olympia Brewery in Washington state. She moved to the Fort Worth, Texas brewery in the same capacity before returning to the Trenton, Ohio brewery as the vice-president/brewery manager.

During her time in the Ohio brewery, Quinn was asked to accept an assignment to lead a corporate project to develop, recommend and then support the implementation of a standardized organizational structure across the seven breweries. Throughout her career, she had the opportunity to blend the science, technology and engineering components of manufacturing with her love of the people side of collaborating, leading, managing and succeeding with others – the opportunity to grow and develop as individuals and share the experience with others of achieving extraordinary results. Primarily because of her Ohio brewery experiences, she has been asked to speak at conferences on a range of subjects, including employee empowerment, creating a unique labor-management relationship and sustainability.

Today, she serves in several volunteer positions including as the board chair of the Boys & Girls Club of Hamilton, a member of the Experience Advisory Board, board chair of the Butler County Port Authority and the vice chair of the Kettering Hamilton Hospital Foundation Board.

Quinn has been recognized with a 2014 Women in Manufacturing STEP Award, the 2018 Ignatian Award for Community Service, the 2019 Everest Award (honoring Leaders and Legends on the I-75 Growth Corridor), and the 2021 Hamilton Heritage Award for Outstanding Community Service. In 2018, she was the first woman to be awarded the MillerCoors Brewery Legends Award.

Quinn received a bachelor's degree in biology from Le Moyne.
